PREFACE.

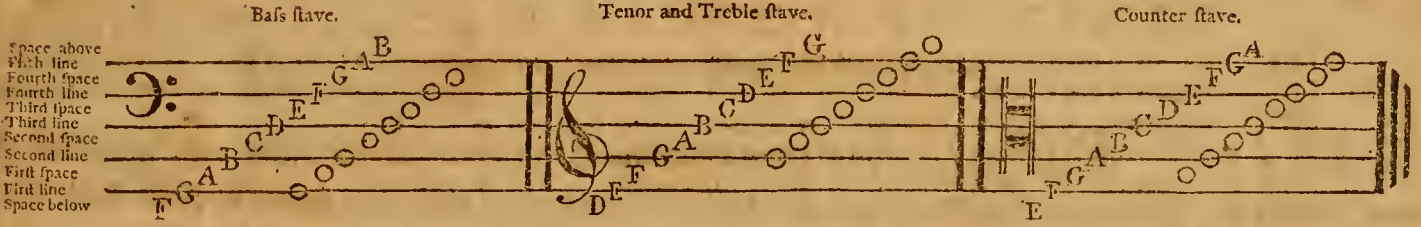
THE Publiſhers of this Collection of SACRED MUSIC have only to promiſe, that, ſhould the MODERN COLLECTION meet the reception they wiſh, the future editions ſhall be as large, as correct, as cheap, and as good, as any muſic book extant. To enable them to fulfil ſo great a promiſe, they reſpectfully ſolicit the patronage of all Maſters and Compoſers of muſic.

Original Pieces, accompanied with the Authors' names, and any hints on improvement, will be gratefully received by the Public's obliged Servants,

THE PUBLISHERS.

RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC.

LESSON I.



AFTER the ſcholar has become familiar with his letters, as they are affixed to the ſeveral lines and ſpaces on the ſtave, he may proceed to call the notes by the names of the letters which they repreſent, beginning and ending at G, repeating them up and down, alternately, until he can recite them readily without the book. In the next place it will be neceſſary to ſing them by the names of the letters, obſerving at the ſame time that between B and C and between E and F, is but one degree or half a tone.

N. B. This leſſon is of great importance to the beginner, and ſhould be underſtood as the foundation of all muſical knowledge and improvements.

LESSON II.

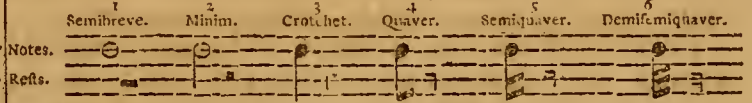
WHERE there are no flats nor ſharps, me is in B.

But if B be flat, me is in	E	If F be ſharp, me is in	F
If B and E be flat, me is in	A	If F and C be ſharp, me is in	C
If B, E and A be flat, me is in	D	If F, C and G be ſharp, me is in	G
If B, E, A and D be flat, me is in	G	If F, C, G and D be ſharp, me is in	D

Above me, the notes aſcending are, faw, ſol, law, faw, ſol, law; below, deſcending, are law, ſol, faw, law, ſol, faw, and then me recurs either way.

Obſerve, that the ſemi-tones are always found between me and faw, and law and faw.

LESSON III.



THE notes and reſts thus arranged, explain, at one view, the proportion they bear to each other; the 1ſt being twice as long as the 2d, the 2d twice as long as the 3d, the 3d twice as long as the 4th, &c.—The reſts are called notes of ſilence; whenever they occur in a tune, the performer is to reſt as long as he would be ſounding the note it repreſents.

N.B. According to ancient tradition, the ſemibreve reſt fills a bar in all moods.

LESSON IV.

A ſtave — IS five lines and their ſpaces, calculated to contain the twelve different ſounds or degrees in muſic.

A ledger line — Is added when notes aſcend or deſcend beyond the limits of the ſtave.

Tied notes — Imply that as many as are tied together ſhould be ſung to one ſyllable.

Tenor and treble cliff. — The cliff is the firſt character affixed to a tune. It is conſidered as the key to open the ſcale of characters, and fully determines their import. If the cliff be moved from its uſual place (which in ſome inſtances it is) it tranſpoſes the whole ſtave, by carrying the letter it naturally ſtands on with it. In general the tenor and treble cliff ſtand on G; the counter on C; and the baſs on F.

Counter cliff.

Baſs cliff.

A flat ♭ — Set before a note ſerves to lower the ſound one degree, or ſemi-tone.

A ſharp ♯ — Set before a note ſerves to raiſe the ſound one degree.

N. B. Both flats and ſharps ſet at the beginning of a tune, have the above influence through the tune, unleſs contradicted by the intervention of a natural.

A natural ♮ — Reſtores a note, made flat or ſharp, to its primitive ſound.

A repeat :S: — Directs the performer to ſing the ſame word or ſtrain twice.

Figures 1 2 — At the end of a ſtrain, direct the performer back to a repeat, leaving the note under figure 2 unſung the firſt time, and the note under figure 1 unſung the laſt time, unleſs both figures are connected together with a ſlur, in which caſe both ſhould be ſung the laſt time.

A hold 𝄐 — Gives the performer liberty to continue the ſound of the note, to which it refers, beyond its common length——☞ The influence of this character, if rightly managed, is very pleaſing. Whenever it occurs, the ſchool or choir ſhould diſcontinue beating time, dwelling ſweetly on the ſound, until the maſter reſumes the time in its proper order.

A mark of diſtinction — Directs the performer to ſing and pronounce the note to which it points, emphatically.

Figure 3 — Diminiſhes the three notes, to which it is affixed, to the time of two.

A point — Adds to a note at the right hand of which it ſtands, one half of its original length.

A ſlur — Directs the performer to ſing all the notes which it includes to one ſyllable.

A direct — At the end of a ſtave, ſhews where the firſt note ſtands in the ſucceeding ſtave.

A bar — Divides the time into equal parts.

A double bar — Shews the end of a ſtrain.

A cloſe — Is affixed to the end of a tune.

Apoggituras — Are ſmall notes which ſhare the time with the ſucceeding or principal note, according to the length and ſituation of the principal.

LESSON V.

COMMON TIME MOODS.

First,

THIS mood is the ſloweſt now in uſe. Crotchets are performed, in the time of one ſecond to each. One ſemibreve, or its quantity in other notes or reſts, fills a bar, which requires four beats, two down, and two up. The accents fall on the firſt and third parts of the bar.

Second,

This mood requires a little quicker movement. The ſame quantity of notes and reſts fills a bar. It is beat and accented like the firſt, excepting when the tune is principally compoſed of minims and crotchets, in which caſe the method of performing it with two beats in a bar is to be preferred.

Third

This mood requires a quicker movement than the laſt, having but two beats in a bar; one beat down, and one up. The ſame number of notes, or reſts, are required to each bar. The accents fall on the firſt and third parts of the bar, but principally on the firſt.

Fourth

This mood requires a ſtill quicker movement, having but one minim, or its quantity of other notes, in a bar, which are beat and accented like the laſt, only one third quicker.

TRIPLE TIME MOODS.

First,

THIS is the ſloweſt movement in triple time. Three minims fill a bar, which requires three motions of the hand, two down, and one up. Minims, in this mood, ſhould be performed in the ſame time as crotchets in the firſt mood of common time. The accents fall on the firſt part of the bar.

Second,

Contains three crotchets in a bar—beat and accented like the firſt—about one third part quicker.

Third,

Contains three quavers in a bar—beat and accented like the ſecond—nearly one third quicker.

COMPOUND TIME MOODS.

First,

THIS mood contains 6 crotchets in a bar, of two equal beats, three down, and three up. Each motion requires one ſecond of time. It is accented principally on the firſt and fourth parts of the bar.

Second,

Contains ſix quavers in a bar—beat and accented like the laſt—about one quarter part quicker.

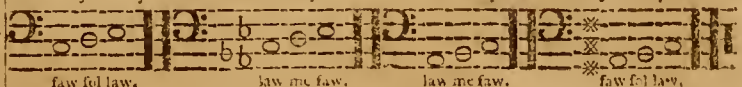
☞ In beating time, the hand ſhould fall in the firſt, and riſe in the laſt part of the bar, in all moods.

LESSON VI.

A KEY in muſic is the principal note or tone to which the whole piece is accommodated, on which the baſs always ends, and from which the pitch of the tune ſhould be taken. There are but two keys in muſic, viz. the major and the minor. The major key is "adapted to expreſs the cheerful paſſions, and the minor is expreſſive of the ſolemn and pathetic."

To determine the key of a tune, find the laſt note of the baſs, and if the 3d above contain 4 ſemi-tones it is major, if but 3, it is minor. See the following examples.

Ex. 1. Major Key. Ex. 2. Minor Key. Ex. 3. Minor Key. Ex. 4. Major Key.



The cyphers under the notes ſhew the diſtance of each from the preceding, i. e. from C to D, and from D to E, in the firſt ex. are two ſemi-tones each, which conſtitute the major 3d. But E being flatted in the 2d ex. the 3d is reduced one degree, which makes the minor 3d. In the 3d ex. from B to C is but one ſemi-tone, of conſequence the 3d is minor; but in the 4th ex. C is ſharped, which adds one degree to its original diſtance from the key note, and is conſtituted the major 3d. Thus the octave is ſubjected to a continual change, at the pleaſure of the compoſer, the ſtate of which ſhould be comprehended by the pupil, in order to perform with ſatisfaction to himſelf and pleaſure to them who hear.

Obſerve, that whatever letter the me is tranſpoſed to, the ſame rule is to be obſerved in determining the key, as in the foregoing examples; and as long as the preſent mode of ſol-faw-ing exiſts, the major key may be known by the name of faw next above me, and the minor by law next below me.

N. B. The firſt note in each example is the key-note.

A THOROUGH knowledge of the preceding leſſons is indiſpenſably neceſſary; the attainment of them will ſufficiently qualify the pupil for practice. In the next place he may proceed to ſome plain tune, on the major key. Teachers of muſic ſhould take great care in the firſt ſetting out, that their ſcholars contract no diſagreeable habits; becauſe much of their future proficiency and manner of performance, depends on the firſt impreſſions. Performing by the words ſhould not be introduced until the ſchool has attained to a juſt notion of time and ſound, and can read any tune by note and letter, without embarraſſment.

No performer ſhould ſing a ſolo, or any other ſtrain which belongs to a different part, without particular deſire. A ſchool or choir ſhould have more than one half the voices on the baſs. Where this is not practicable, a baſs viol would be of great ſervice, if it be judiciouſly played.

Of PRONUNCIATION.

GOOD pronunciation is one of the firſt and principal beauties of ſinging. The mouth ſhould be opened freely, but not wide; either extreme would deſtroy a good tone, and prevent juſt expreſſion. Many ſingers who read and ſpeak tolerably well, are extremely erroneous in their manner of pronouncing ſome particular words, when they are ſet to muſic; for inſtance, the words reaſon, hearken, token, &c. which have but one accent, are often ſung rea-zon, hear-ken, to-ken, which is very diſagreeable and improper. Words which end in ple, ble, &c. are often falſely accented on the laſt ſyllable, which renders them thus, pel, bel, &c. Words ending in y, with a few exceptions, ſhould be pronounced as ending in e, or ſhort i. The l ſhould be ſilent in walk, talk, calm, &c. In fine, the beſt direction which can be given is this; let every word be ſung diſtinctly, ſmoothly, and gracefully, every way conformably to the beſt rules of ſpeaking.

Of ACCENT.

ACCENT is another very important part of muſic, which is inſeparably connected with good pronunciation: It is properly an agreeable ſwell or force of the voice; but it is often erroneouſly applied to the notes, more like marks of diſtinction than otherwiſe. If the poetry be good, and the muſic well adapted to it, the accents will fall on thoſe parts of the bars, in the different moods of time, which are pointed out in the fifth leſſon; but where the muſic does not coincide with the proper emphaſis of the words, it ſhould give way, or bend to the words. Nothing is more common than falſe accenting, the principal occaſion of which is harſh or loud ſinging. Many ſingers make two accents on one note, more particularly on a pointed note in binary time, which immediately precedes a fuge or repeat, which they break off with such violence, as is truly shocking to a delicate ear. This injudicious practice effectually tends to prevent soft and graceful singing, and renders the most pleasing compositions disgustful to the audience. Were it possible for a performer of common taste, to hear himself at a distance, thus violate the nicest rules of harmony, he would not be guilty of it a second time. A pointed note which fills three fourths of a bar, notwithstanding it includes two bar accents, cannot consistently receive but one. A semibreve should be struck soft, gently swelled to the centre, and diminished to the end. A number of long notes, driven through bars, should be sounded full and smooth to the end. A chain of notes should be sung soft, keeping the lips and teeth apart until the slur is finished.

Of TIME.

IN beating time, great care is necessary that the hand do not influence the voice, by creating misplaced accents, which is almost an universal error. To prevent this, avoid all violent motion; the least motion of the hand or finger is sufficient to preserve time. No strain should be sung any faster in the quickest mood of time, than will admit of plain, distinct pronunciation. By hurrying a piece of music, performers are apt to sing harsh and uneven, in consequence of which, the beauty of the subject is obscured, and confusion introduced. Hence we learn that the subject and occasion should govern the movement.

Of SYNCOPATION.

IT is very difficult to do justice to the composition where notes are driven through bars, and otherwise interfere with the natural course of time and accent, without an able instructor. The common practice is very injudicious and erroneous. In the 3d mood of common time, where a minim stands between two crotchets, it is common to perform them like four crotchets, which destroys the intention of the author, and greatly injures expression. Where the first crotchet and succeeding minim are slurred together, they should be sung as smooth as possible, in order to prevent a second accent on the word or syllable to which they are adapted. The same precaution is necessary in all moods of time wherever an instance of this kind occurs.

Of SOFT SINGING.

IN a school, or choir, where soft music is successfully inculcated, it would be difficult for an attentive observer to point out many imperfections. Soft music is always accompanied with graceful motion, just expression, proper accent, and captivating harmony. On the other hand, harsh singing is attended with convulsive motion, bad pronunciation, misapplied accent, and a disgustful jarring. The latter is too just a description of the present mode of singing, occasioned in a great measure by a mistaken idea, which many entertain, that good music consists principally in singing loud; but just the reverse of this is the case. In performing fortes and fortissimos, the voice should not be extended beyond its natural elevation; in performing pianos the voice should be reduced to as small a degree of sound, as will just admit of intelligible pronunciation; and in all common strains, a medium should be constantly observed, neither so faint, as to dwindle into indifference, nor so loud as to admit of a single harsh tone. Such a practice, if once adopted and pursued, will not fail to arrest the attention and gain the approbation of every adequate judge of music. A reform in these particulars must begin with teachers of music; hence the great importance of employing such instructors, as will, by their example as well as precept, inculcate soft, smooth, and graceful singing. Solos should be sung soft, high notes clear, but not loud. In singing counter, great attention is necessary, that every note be touched soft, and smooth, otherwise the counter will predominate, which is very inconsistent with the principles of music.

Of DIRECTORY TERMS.

A STRICT and constant adherence to the terms, moderato, vivace, forte, piano, &c. will add greatly to the beauty of the performance, and are of as great importance as any other characters in muſic. No one, it is preſumed, will diſpute the neceſſity of ſuch terms as are occaſionally placed over the muſic; yet ſingers in general are ſo regardleſs of them, that the effect they are intended to produce on the audience, is entirely loſt. When the term moderato occurs, the ſtrain ſhould be performed at leaſt one third part ſlower. The ſame difference ſhould be obſerved in all other terms, particularly in piano. The ſurpriſing good effect of ſuch a method, if once properly adhered to, will be ſeen by the attention it will command in every audience.

Of GRACES and ORNAMENTS.

THE trill, notes of tranſition, &c. have not been attended to in the preceding rules; it being much better to omit, than attempt them in young ſchools. The moſt important graces and ornaments of muſic, are natural accompliſhments; it is therefore impoſſible to acquire them mechanically, ſo as to add to the real beauty of the muſic. The greateſt ornament in ſinging, is a decent, modeſt deportment, and a heart deeply impreſſed with a due reverence for the name and worſhip of that infinitely exalted Being, to whom we owe our exiſtence, and every bleſſing, and to whoſe praiſe we ſhould ever tune our voices.

Happy the church, thou facred place, The ſeat of thy Creator's grace ; Thine holy courts are his abode, Thou earthly palace of our God.
Thy walls are ſtrength, and at thy gates A guard of heavenly warriors waits; Nor ſhall thy deep foundations move, Built on thy juſtice and thy love, Built, &c.

ANTHEMS.

Arise, shine, O Zion,	Williams.	117
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel,	do.	105
Behold I bring you glad tidings,	Stephens.	41
Behold, God is my salvation,	Selby.	84
Come, Charity, with goodness crown'd,		61
From heaven the loud angelic song began,		15
Hear my prayer, O Lord,	Stephenson.	123
Hark! what distant music,		110
Hail, Sacred Art,	Rogerson.	168
I heard a great voice,	Billings.	108
I heard a great voice,	Kimball.	210
Lord now lettest thou thy servant,	Steph.	144
Lift up your heads, O ye gates,	Williams.	103
O come let us sing unto the Lord,	Kimball.	161
O be joyful in the Lord,	Selby.	148
O Zion that bringest good tidings,	Steph.	113
O praise the Lord in that blest place,	do.	132
Praise the Lord, O my soul,	do.	66
Praise the Lord, ye servants,	do.	139
Ye Nymphs of Solyma begin the song,		90
